DECORATION DAY

Patriotic Observance—Exercises at G. A. R. Hall and Grand View Cemetery.

The Young People's Union of the Baptist church enjoyed a picnic at Sycamore canyon on Decoration Day. The young folks tramped from Glendale and ate luncheon beneath the trees They staid until quite late in the evening.

The Seventh and Eighth grades of the Sixth street grammar school, chaperoned by Mrs. Larkey and Miss Ida M. Waite, passed Decoration Day at Bee Rock, Griffith Park. The trip from Glendale was made in a hay rack and the day was spent in games and climbing the rock.

Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Moody entertained at their home on 111 North Louise street, with a luncheon Monday evening, the Board of Deacons of the Baptist church, their wives and Rev. Eugene Haines of Vermont. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Rawlins, Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Reed, Arthur W. Frazee, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. W. Ross, Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Dreyer. A delightful as well as profitable evening was spent.

A large party of young people from the Epworth League of the First Methodist church of Los Angeles enjoyed a picnic at Verdugo Park on Decoration Day. The party came by trolley as far as First street, where they took hay racks to the park, several of the party making the journey on foot. The day was delightfully spent beneath the large trees and beside the stream. Dinner was served at noon and the entire day proved altogether delightful.

A picnic party of Glendale people went to Clifton-by-the-Sea and from there to Fisherman's Cove on Monday, where a pleasant day was spent. Among them were J. L. Whitaker, Mrs. Whitaker, Miss Ina Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Pack, Miss Penn, Miss Emma Penn, Miss Anderson, Mrs. Wm. Mitchell, Miss Frances Eyre, Mr. Reginald Whitaker, Mr. Walter Penn, Mr. Charles E. Anderson, Mr. Prosser Penn, Mr. and Mrs. Kirby, and Mr. Calvin.

An enjoyable Decoration Day affair was the picnic given by Mr. E. B. Riggs to his class in the Presbyterian Sunday school. The company, including about twenty young men and ladies, met at the home of Mr. Riggs on Fourth street and at 6:30 p. m. boarded a hay rack and started for Bee Rock, Griffith Park, arriving there shortly before 8 o'clock.

Above the tables at the park many Japanese lanterns were strung, and these, along with the two roaring camp fires, had the effect of continuing the "picnic spirit" which possessed the young people. Shortly after the arrival at the park an elaborate luncheon was served, followed by games and other amusements. The party remained at the park until the silvery moon peeped above the hills to the east, when the trip home was begun. It was a wee hour when Glendale was reached and the company disbanded, vowing that their teacher was "the best ever."

The young people enjoying the evening were Misses Blanche Tarr, Frances Jackson, Violet Turner, Miss Severance, Grace Dominy, Ethel Nelson and Irene Ward; Messrs. Clyde Morrow, George Benson, James Newton, Ray Morrow, Milton Newton, Clarence Sprinkle, Nelson Sprinkle, Cyril White, Theodore Gould, Logan Fairchild and wife; Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Riggs.

Monday morning N. P. Banks Post and Corps and patriotic citizens of Tropico, Glendale, West Glendale and Burbank assembled at Grand View Cemetery.

The graves of the soldier dead were strewn with flowers by pupils of the West Glendale and Burbank schools. When "taps" were sounded, wreaths were hung by the Womans' Relief Corps for thirty veterans who lie in this cemetery "under the sod and the dew, waiting the judgment day."

Following the opening exercises Grace and Elizabeth Utter and Muriel Turner, representing the Tropico schools, sang "Under the Blue and the Gray," and "Tramp the Boys are Marching."

Pupils of the West Glendale schools under the supervision of the principal, Mrs. Frank Gilman Taylor, and supervisor of music, Mrs. Dora Gibson, gave several patriotic numbers. A boy and a girl from the Burbank schools each gave a patriotic reading.

Following the closing exercises the ladies of the Corps decorated the graves of their members who have passed away, Mrs. Amanda Crist, Mrs. Mary Gillett, Mrs. Mary Patterson, Mrs. Martha Sherman, Mrs. Isabella Barrett, Mrs. Eliza Cole, Mrs. Addie Kanouse, Mrs. Helen Corwin Pierce and Mrs. M. L. Galbraith.

DECORATION DAY OBSERVED.

N. P. Banks Post and Corps Honor the Day.

Officers and members of N. P. Banks Post and Corps and patriotic citizens assembled at G. A. R. hall, Sunday afternoon and held appropriate patriotic exercises to commemorate the nation's dead.

Forty grey-headed and grizzled men who went out in the prime and vigor of youth and young manhood in the early sixties, occupied seats on the platform which was decorated in flags and blossoms. The program opened with the singing of "Battle Hymn of the Republic," lead by Miss Elise Vance; prayer, Rev. J. W. Utter, Central Christian church; Scriptural reading, Rev. H. C. Shoemaker, First Presbyterian church; closing with the audience repeating the 23rd Psalm. Marple Quartet rendered "One Sweetly Solemn Thought;" Mrs. Alfred Engelhardt, Corps president, assisted by the officers and members of the Corps, conducted memorial services in memory of Mrs. Matfie Sherman. The open Bible was placed on the altar and after Mrs. Engelhardt placed a magnolia blossom on the Bible, the officers and members passed before the altar and placed fragrant blossoms thereon. All united in singing "Nearer My God to Thee." Orders from the department were read by the adjutant, Rev. Fletcher Pomeroy, Marple Quartet rendered another selection. Capt. J. H. Wells delivered a patriotic address teeming with true patriotism and loyalty to country and his country's emblem. Following this noble address the ladies of the Corps arose and holding aloft four silken banners repeated the flag salute. "America" closed the program, after which Rev. W. C. Watkin of the First Methodist Episcopal church, pronounced the benediction.

As a fitting close to a day which was devoted to the memory of the dead, the officers and members of N. P. Banks Post and Corps assembled at the First Methodist Episcopal church and enjoyed a patriotic program rendered by the pastor, Rev. Botkin, assisted by the choir and members of the church. Gerald Kirkham gave the bugle calls at the beginning and closing of the program.

Rev. Botkin presented a number of stereopticon views depicting war scenes. Illustrated songs were given by Miss Cadmus and Mr. Joseph Marple. Readings were given by Mrs. F. F. Morgan, Miss Mabel Winebrenner, Miss Hazel Allen and Miss Wanda Scofield. Ten little girls gave the flag salute. Rev. Botkin presented this program in honor of his father who served during the Civil war.

LINCOLN-ROOSEVELT MEETING.

A bunch of Lincoln-Roosevelt candidates and speakers, of whom Mr. Hiram Johnson, candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, was the star, visited Glendale at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, coming here in automobiles after having held meetings during the day in Tropico, Burbank, Fernando and Lankershim. They were accompanied by a fifer and a drummer who understood their business and gave due notice of the presence of the speakers. Besides Mr. Johnson, the party consisted of Mr. W. D. Stephens, candidate for the nomination of congress in this district; Senator Charley Bell of Pasadena; Assemblyman Cattrell, representing this district; Mr. O'Brien, of Chico, candidate for the nomination for secretary of state, and Mr. John M. Eshleman, of Imperial, candidate for the state board of equalization. Senator Bell acted as chairman and introduced the speakers, who spoke from an automobile in the shade of the buildings on Fourth street, corner of Glendale avenue. Mr. Johnson made the principal speech of the program. He stated that there was no issue in this campaign except the question whether the Southern Pacific Railroad company or the people should dominate the state and told his hearers that under the present direct primary law they have their first opportunity to throw off the yoke of that corporation. He is a good speaker and created an impression of a man thoroughly in earnest in his belief that he is the one man who of all the candidates for governor is free from the thralldom of the octopus. Senator Bell told of some of his legislative experiences. Messrs. Eshelman, Cattrell and O'Brien spoke briefly. The meeting was attended by about a hundred voters and others.

NARROW ESCAPE.

The "good time" which a party of Glendale young people had gone to Long Beach to enjoy at a house party last Saturday and Sunday, came near being turned into a mournful affair by the narrow escape for their lives which "Johnny" Smalley and two or three others had in the treacherous breakers at that place last Sunday afternoon. As it was, Smalley was saved from drowning by the prompt action of the life savers' crew stationed at the beach, who took the boat out and rescued him. Others of the young men who went too far out had nearly as close a call, being tumbled about very severely by the tremendous swell that breaks some distance out from shore at that place. The exhibition of the dangerous power of the waves, which the strongest swimmers cannot breast successfully, was witnessed by hundreds of spectators, the effect being such that at the usual bathing hour the next day the beach was almost deserted.

BURBANK AUTO STAGE SERVICE.

By reference to the advertisement it will be noted that an auto stage service has been established between Glendale and Burbank with the constantly increasing growth of population in the valley northward; this service should fill a "long-felt want."

SPORTING NEWS

Four games on the Glendale diamond since our last issue; sounds as if there was something doing, eh! And between the home team and the outsiders the honors are about even; two victories and two defeats. Well, we can't always have things our own way and it has been demonstrated that when the home boys have a long stretch of winnings they grow careless; so hereafter look for variety just to avoid anything like monotony. Perhaps we win and perhaps we won't, but all the time the boys "play ball" and make progress even in defeat.

On Saturday the first game was Glendale City versus Western Litho Co., and we beat them by a score of 4 to 3.

Then the Schoolmasters beat Glendale by 10 to 3—too bad, wasn't it?

On Decoration Day the first game was with S. C. Varsity, and they won it by 7 to 3. But we evened that up by beating the Los Angeles Stove Works boys by 1 to nothing. Manager Valentine tried out his new south paw, Groshong and is well pleased with the result. He thinks him a comer. Mason also proved out well and he thinks the problem of a pitcher will soon be solved. In the game with the Schoolmasters Benson struck out twelve men, but there were too many errors by other plays to make it count.

Come out Saturday again and see a snappy game.

MEETING OF IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION.

The meeting of the Glendale and Vicinity Improvement Association held last Friday evening was one of the most successful and interesting of any in its history. While the size of the audience was largely due to the attractive program offered, it also proved that a large number of our citizens are being made sensible of the fact that this association can be made a power for ever increasing good service to the community. Mr. H. P. Coker spoke briefly upon the subject, "The Model Citizen," giving his ideas of that popular but exceedingly rare individual. Mrs. Frank Morgan, accompanied on the piano by little Miss Helene Morgan, treated the audience to a violin solo. Mr. John T. Pope of Los Angeles spoke at considerable length upon the subject of Improvement Associations. Mr. Pope has been and is an active worker along these lines and his talk was filled with interesting statements of what had been done in other communities and with encouraging suggestions as to possibilities here. He advised that the association join the Los Angeles Federation of Improvement Associations, meeting once a month at the Chamber of Commerce in that city. Acting on this suggestion a resolution was adopted instructing the president to appoint five members from this association to represent it in the federation. Mrs. Kinney, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Gibson, sang a fine contralto solo and responded to an encore by another. Mr. E. U. Emery spoke on municipal ownership of water, and Mrs. Ella C. Witham on Drinking Fountains. A number of new members joined the association and the meeting was marked by enthusiasm and the get-together spirit.

Committees were appointed as follows:

To represent Association at Federation: H. P. Coker, F. J. Muehlman, Chas. Grist, Dr. Jessie Russell, Mrs. F. L. Church.

Entertainment: Mrs. F. L. Church, Mrs. J. W. Usilton, Mr. J. H. Russel, F. L. Church.

Publicity: J. C. Sherer, C. E. Snively, J. M. Freeman.

TRUSTEES MEETING.

The trustees met promptly at 7:30, all members present except Mr. Coker who arrived at 8 o'clock. The usual routine business was transacted. A communication was received from Street Superintendent Sinclair, in which he expressed his protest against the insinuations cast upon the conduct of his office at the last meeting by one of the trustees. The letter was referred to the committee of the whole. Mr. H. W. Coombs was engaged to audit the city books at an expense of $65.00.

The purchase of a Burroughs Calculating machine was authorized at a cost of $250. The clerk was instructed to have the annual report of his office printed in pamphlet form.

The bid of the Westinghouse Electrical and Mfg. Co. to furnish supplies for the electric lighting department, was read and accepted, a contract being ordered to be drawn. There being no other business before the meeting the board adjourned and the members went into executive session as a committee of the whole.

WATER

The Local Supply and Quality—Some Hints About Irrigation

Now that warm and dry weather is near at hand a few suggestions in regard to irrigation seems appropriate. In the first place Glendale, Tropico and vicinity have an ample water supply, one of the best that any community in the neighborhood of Los Angeles can boast the possession of. Unfortunately, however, the water being distributed by a number of small companies, there are some sections where there is at times a shortage, this is particularly the case in a portion of the valley where the users are supplied directly from a pipe line which is not backed by a reservoir. Any shortage therefore should not be attributed, as it sometimes is, to the shortage in the general supply but rather to the inequality of the distribution. Another complaint sometimes heard is in regard to the quality of the water in some sections. Occasionally there is more or less vegetable matter found in drinking water and the cause is usually attributed to the condition of the reservoirs. Usually this explanation is also wrong. At this season when there is such general use of the water for irrigation, these complaints are not as numerous as during the winter months. The trouble generally will be found to be in the lateral pipe lines where, owing to the fact that there is but little water used from that particular section of pipe, or that the dip of the lateral is downward from the main, the water does not drain out and at the end of the lateral wil become more or less stagnant. Tenants moving into a house should always give this matter prompt attention and see that the lateral pipes is drained out as near the end as possible. But this article is written for the purpose of making suggestions as to the use of water for irrigating purposes, by the use of hose. The tendency almost invariably among newcomers who have had but little experience in the use of water for irrigation, is to use it too often and in greater quantities than is required. They seem to think that they are "getting the worth of their money" if they take all the water they can get, which is often a serious mistake. As a general rule it is best to water thoroughly even if less frequently. Lawns will stand daily watering although not absolutely requiring it, unless it be in very hot dry weather. But the daily watering of anything that grows out of the unprotected earth where the ground is not shaded and dries off rapidly on the surface is not best—while if the ground about any growing thing is shaded or mulched it certainly does not require daily watering and will probably be the worse for receiving it. Where the watering is done on ground exposed to the sun's rays, the earth should be dug up when it becomes dry enough to be handled well, so as to keep it from getting hard and baked and permit of ventilation—trees or plants can be as effectually killed by daily watering and neglect of cultivation as by utter neglect. Young trees should be thoroughly wet when water is applied and not just sprinkled on the surface. Frequent irrigation of trees tends to develop a system of surface roots which is undesirable and shortens the tree's life. It is a pretty good rule to give the tree plenty of water when it is set out and let it alone as long as it appears to be doing well. As to vegetables, there are but few varieties that will do well on irrigation alone without cultivation, and the rule to water thoroughly and cultivate well afterwards is about the best to follow, although the variations in soil have to be taken into consideration. This applies to small fruits as well, although the strawberry, having roots that lie near the surface requires watering more frequently than anything else. On our heavier soils good cultivation will almost take the place of irrigation. On such soil nearly all of our garden crops will do fairly well during the early part of the summer without irrigation at all, although better results will be obtained by the use of water occasionally followed by thorough cultivation. Deciduous fruit trees do not, as a rule, require irrigation, but the earth about them should be kept stirred up thoroughly from early in the spring all through the summer. Orange and lemon trees will grow well without irrigation until they begin to bear, although their growth can be forced by watering, and usually this is done, but as soon as they begin to make fruit they require an abundance of moisture to produce good results. The aim should always be to endeavor to furnish growing trees and vegetation just that quantity of water which they require and then stop, not applying that illogical argument for using the hose which sometimes works destruction in other directions, "if a little is good more is better."

Mr. James I. Anderson has sold his stationery business in the Filger block to Mr. C. H. Bott of Los Angeles, who took possession June 1st. Mr. Anderson who came to California principally on account of his health, found that confinement to business was injuring him physically and therefore considered it prudent to retire. He and his family will shortly remove to Los Angeles, which is to be regretted by a large circle of friends.

Mr. Bott is building a house on Fifth street near Jackson which upon completion he will occupy with his family.

GLENDALE, CAL., JUNE 3, 1910

At Escondido, the girls of the High school have formed two baseball teams and are accumulating sprains, bruises and experience.

The attention of our friends and correspondents is again called to the fact that the NEWS goes to press on Thursday and all copy should be in our hands by four o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

The Annual Progress edition of the Monrovia Messenger comes to us filled with evidence of the growth and prosperity of our sister city. The population is stated as being 4000; improved streets, 30 miles; three grammar schools; four banks; municipal water system, etc. As the writer remembers that locality when Monrovia was not, he notes a difference.

Col. G. J. Griffith told a Hollywood Citizen reporter the other day that he and associates would furnish the money to build a trackless trolley line to Hollywood Peak if the city of Los Angeles will furnish the power. The trackless trolley gives great promise for the future, but it will probably be found that it will require a well prepared roadway to make it practicable. It should first be tried on our city streets.

Eusapia Paladino, "The Wonderful Psychic," who has fooled thousands of spectators of her really wonderful performances, has been fully exposed as a skilful trickster who by hand and foot and in a hundred ways known to "magicians," performs the feats which have deceived a great many scientists and others who sought to discover the secret of her power. There will still however continue to be those who believe that she was assisted by "spirits."

Representative James McLachlan made recently in Congress a strong speech calling attention of the government authorities to the unprotected condition of the Pacific Coast in the event of war. He claimed that the large sums of money expended for coast fortifications during the past twenty years, would be of little real value, as it was put into batteries of which the guns could only be trained out to sea and could not be used to protect themselves from a land attack.

Prof. Billings of the Kansas University gives out the startling statement that in the usual ten cents worth of ice cream there is exactly 3,666,666 microbes. If the figures were not so exact we should doubt the statement, but there seems to be no alternative but to swallow it, microbes and all. This explains what has hitherto been a mystery, and that is, why the ordinary dose of ice cream contains so littel cream! The solution is now easy—there isn't room for all these microbes and the cream too.

The action of the Democrats in Congress in refusing to make $25,000 immediately available so that from that sum President Taft should be enabled to meet the expenses of his across-the-continent trip, has been repudiated by the people of Augusta, Ga., with infinite credit to that city by an offer of $5000 to the president to enable him to come out of the affair without loss. He will probably not accept it, but the offer is very creditable to the people of the South who make it, and should be an effectual rebuke to the politicians who misrepresent them in Congress.

EUCALYPTUS AGAIN.

This paper took occasion several months ago to call attention to the foolish and sometimes fraudulent statements being circulated in regard to the phenomenal growth of eucalyptus trees and the profits to be made out of planting groves. At the time these criticisms were made a number of reputable papers were advertising various eucalyptus promotion schemes. Lately, however, these advertisements are conspicuously absent from the columns of the "great dailies" and the fever for obtaining wealth from fast growing groves of this tree, seems to have run its limit, undoubtedly leaving an aftermath of disappointed promotors and speculators. Now we notice that the California state forestry service in connection with the federal department, is to make a systematis effort to secure data in regard to the industry, particularly as regards the rapidity of growth. The result should be of great benefit to intending investors, but many who have invested are undoubtedly beyond help.

THE TARIFF AND PRICES.

The preliminary work of the committee appointed by the U. S. senate to investigate the cause of the increasing prices of commodities, shows that there is no connection between this increase and the tariff. The increases are principally in the products of the farm and the farmers are the beneficiaries while the old and reliable law of supply and demand is responsible for the larger part of the increase. As showing in a striking manner how history repeats itself, some one has unearthed an interesting report made to Congress in 1836 upon the same subject. It shows that at that time wages were from a third to a half lower than now, while the cost of many articles of necessity was higher. A laborer received then seventy-five cents for a day's work as against $1.75 to $2.25 at the present time. Sugar then cost fourteen cents a pound, almost three times its price now. Flour was seven dollars a barrel. There is no question but that the wages today of the workingman will procure more comforts for his family and himself than the wages prevailing at that time would provide them with. It has not been in the United States alone that there has been a large increase in prices in the last decade. In England the mean price of 45 commodities in 1896 was 59.2; in 1910 it was 79.1. Beef, mutton and pork increased 40 per cent during that period and wheat increased in price from 20 to 38 points.

A SAFE AND SANE FOURTH OF JULY.

The movement in favor of celebrating the Fourth of July in a more reasonable and safer manner than has been the custom in times past, is constantly growing. The most of the large cities have taken hold of the matter and the indiscriminate firing of crackers and bombs is prohibited. There should be no disposition to prohibit "Young America" from having a good time, even from making more noise than usual, possibly this conduces to the growth of patriotism and is a wholesome output. But in thickly settled communities there will always exist a minority who from one reason or another object to the terrific racket which sometimes characterizes the celebration of the day. And this objection is based upon grounds which to the individual concerned are thoroughly logical and reasonable; frequently because they haev not nerves which are attuned to harmony with unusual noise and often in the case of persons who are ill the effects are seriously detrimental to their health. It is important that anything that tends to cultivate the true feeling of patriotism in the youthful mind should be encouraged, but it is even of more importance that youth should early be taught to respect the rights of others, and among those rights guaranteed by the immortal document, the creation of which is celebrated on July 4th, "is the pursuit of happiness" in any way that does not encroach upon the rights of others, a reservation which should be particularly borne in mind when celebrating the day which all good Americans delight to honor.

BOTH GOVERNOR AND SENATOR FROM THE SOUTH.

We are far from agreeing with our overgrown contemporary, the Los Angeles Times, in its suggestion that the senator to succeed Mr. Flint should be taken from the North, for the purpose of giving the southern end of the state the governor. We do not believe that Mr. Stanton, who aspires to receive the Republican nomination is in accord with this idea; if he is, it proves him to be a worse politician than we had ever suspected. There should be no question about the locality from which Senator Flint's successor should be taken, considering the Tehachapi for convenience as the dividing line. It is almost an unwritten law that each end of the state should have one of the senators, and this having been the case in times past when we supplied a comparatively small proportion of the population and a proportionate amount of the taxes for the state government, our constant growth in population and general development now showing a large gain over the increase in these material things shown by our northern neighbors, it is a ridiculous proposition that for the bare chance of securing the selection of a governor we should barter away a senator. There is no good reason why Southern California should not furnish both the candidate for governor and for senator in this campaign, and it is one of the weak features of the Lincoln-Roosevelters that they should be willing to barter off a governor for a senator. The Times and the Lincoln-Roosevelt leaders are alike in this particular, reminding us of the Spartan spirit of Josh Billings who was for a consideration, willing to sacrifice all of his wife's relatives.

THE COMET AND THE ASTRONOMERS.

The long-looked for comet has come as predicted, but instead of being the awesome thing of flaming aspect that the world expected, it is little more than a blur in the western sky in the evening. As a spectacle it is a rank failure and the people generally have a feeling that they have not been treated right in the matter. But the disappointment, sad as it may be, is not without its compensations. Astronomers of late have been putting on airs, as it were, and perhaps this demonstration of their fallibility may have a tendency to bring them down to earth and chasten the pride of their spirits. A comparison of the predictions some of them made with the meagre measure of fulfillent that followed, is suggestive of the contrast between the hopeful prognostications of the politicians on the losing side in a political campaign and the returns of the ballots that appear after the election.

Now, after a period devoted to "explanations," we shall probably be treated to further volumes of speculation in regard to Mars, in reference to which astronomers reecntly have preserved a discreet silence, as our celestial neighbor, we are told, has changed its aspect so radically that the theory of there being visible canals thereon, is scarcely tenable any longer. Still the subject of astronomy will ever remain a fascinating one and although there will continue to be those who go into its study with a fine enthusiasm which lends them to adopt the theories which appeal to their imagination more than to their reasoning faculties, there will remain that band of devoted students of the heavens who care less always for startling theories than they do for the well established and sublime truths. A great benefit derived from the wide attention given to Halley's comet, will be the turning of men's thoughts to those "other worlds than ours," so that their minds may be lifted if even for a little while only, from the things of earth which so much enthrall them to something different and, therefore, better.

DA. WOODROW WILSON AND THE COLLEGES.

As a recent speaker at our High school (a "professor") in his eagerness to emphasize the advantage of the college-bred man above all others, took occasion to say that a man of the Lincoln type could not now be elected president, the following words by Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university, seem particularly timely:

"While attending a recent Lincoln celebration I asked myself if Lincoln would have been as serviceable to the people of this country had he been a college man, and I was obliged to say to myself that he would not. The process to which the college man is subjected does not render him serviceable to the country as a whole. It is for this reason that I have dedicated every power in me to a democratic regeneration. The American college must be saturated with the same sympathies as the common people. The colleges of this country must be reconstructed from the top to the bottom." Words like these coming from one who occupies such an important position in the educational world, indicate a far more serious deficiency in our institutions for the "higher education," than any rank outsider would dare to utter. The special and particular object of Mr. Wilson's criticism is the endowed college; endowed by plutocracy and accused of ministering to the plutocratic rather than the democratic ideal. The endowed institution is a beneficiary of a patron who is naturally regarded by all who are connected with it, as one at all times deserving of their gratitude for favors bestowed; and if those in control of it should shape their policy so as to assure a continuance of financial support, they would simply be following out the natural bent of the human mind. It is not natural to suppose that the professor whose place and pay depended upon a particular patron, would deliver himself of many expressions antagonistic to the use of "tainted money." But the indictment is far more sweeping than that, and the distinguished professor does not seem to qualify his words in anyway whatever when he declares that "the colleges must be reconstructed from top to bottom."

THE LOCAL PAPER.

Why take the local paper, is a question that can be answered with so many reasons for taking it and reading it, from the purely selfish standpoint of the reader, that it would seem as if the question answered itself. The reasons for not taking it are not numerous and as a rule are unprintable, not because they are unfit for print but because they would expose the person giving them to suspicions which really might prove unfounded, for many otherwise very good citizens, do not give the local paper the support to which it is entitled, they prefer to batten on the unearned increment. And after all that is about all there is to it. It is a rule with some business men to pay out no money the return of which is not absolutely assured. As a rule business conducted on this principle is a "safe" business, it does not bring the person pursuing this policy to the poor house, neither does it get him a halo—and self-satisfied though he may be, the time may come when he will long for a halo above all things—but when he applies for it, it will be found that his name is not on the subscription list nor the advertising ledger, and that the halos are all out. But, as this is a selfish world, suppose we consider the matter from the standpoint of unadulterated selfishness and put the question another way—can any one afford not to take the local paper? This time the answer is easy—no, unhesitatingly, no.

You cannot possibly be so independent of your neighbors as to have absolutely no interest in their comings and goings, their doings and their thoughts, you may fancy that you do not care about them, but you do. It may be of great advantage to you in many ways to know who your neighbors are and to be known to them. Whatever business you may be and however poor the local paper may be, it is incredible that there should not be in the fifty-two issues which make the round of the year some suggestion which will not be of value to you in your business.

And when we speak of "business" we do not mean solely that business which is conducted in the store or the office, but the business carried on by "Human Interest Brothers" at the sign of the Earth. The business of living and let-live, the business of being a housekeeper, or a man-servant or a maid-servant—the business of existing. The local paper must be a poor thing indeed if it does not occasionally give you something to think about and possibly you do not know what a wholesome exercise real thinking is, it has been known to work revolutions—try it, and as a first exercise have a thought that just now you will do something worth while for the home paper. The reading of the local paper keeps you in touch with your neighbors, gives a sense of kinship and common interest without which life becomes a hundrum thing that is measured only by the moments that pass, not by what you live. A brief item in a newspaper has been the means of restoring lost ones to their kindred, renewing old friendships, and in the Lost and Found column alone the price of the subscription has many a time been made up to the subscriber. Just now as we write a big fat pocketbook lies on the table, awaiting the call of the owner, and the editor knows him because he subscribes for the paper. A few years ago a man came in and subscribed for the paper, as sad experience had taught him the risks he was taking in not reading it. He had lost a horse, had spent ten days time and as many dollars in hunting the animal, to find at last that it was advertised in the local paper. Many a reader has had his attention called to the fact that the day of delinquency of paying taxes was at hand or making payment for a bit of street work. Citizens have been reminded in perusing the local paper that only a few days more would elapse before it would be too late to register, so that as good citizens they could exercise the right of franchise. All sorts of business has been brought to its readers by the faithful local chronicler of the days' doings—not in the way of things told as much perhaps as by way of things suggested.

The new comer into any community, the home seeker, overlooks the most successful medium for making him a part and parcel of the community, if he neglects to avail himself of the good offices of the local paper in making him acquainted with his new surroundings. Many of the lessons that others have to learned by hard experience, may be made easy to the beginner if he avails himself of that medium which particularly devotes itself to recording the experiences of daily life. A copy of the home paper mailed to a friend will give more information and a better idea of the community in which it is published than the average letter over which perhaps an hour is spent. The local paper is a co-operative concern, it receives its support from the community and acknowledges the obligation resting upon it to support that community in every legitimate way, but this responsibility rests equally upon the public, the people among whom it is published, and can not be fairly evaded by any member of the community. Why should the local paper be supported? Because it gives full value for money received, and is a benefit to every member of the community which it represents. Because it is a twentieth century necessity and the people should cheerfully pay for benefits received.

Better Service

We beg to notify our customers that beginning Wednesday, June 1st, we discontinued sending our solicitors for orders, but instead will call you up by 'phone. This will save annoyance and worry for the housekeeper, and will enable us to make deliveries much earlier in the day.

Under the old system it requires all the forenoon for solicitors to get around; about three hours more in which to put up orders. It is then 3:30 to 4 o'clock by the time orders leave the store. As a result it is as late as 7 o'clock before some customers get their groceries, no matter how faithfully the delivery man works.

By the new system deliveries will be made between 11 and 2 o'clock, on a regular schedule, which will be a convenience to both you and ourselves.

Our object in inaugurating this improved system is not alone to reduce expense, but to enable us to to give our customers PERFECT SERVICE, and we ask you to co-operate with us in our efforts to improve it. It pleases us to please you.

THE ASTRONOMERS AT FAULT?

(For the News)

There appears to be a great deal of confusion in the public mind about the movements of the comet, which are supposed to be anything but in agreement with the calculations of astronomers, who in turn are charged with being entirely at fault in their predictions regarding the mysterious wanderer.

But all these popular suppositions are entirely erroneous; the dear public has been confusing two ideas, and in this mistake it has been gladly and carefully assisted by the daily sensational press. Astronomy has recently been alluded to in one of our prominent local dailies as "the alleged exact science of astronomy," as if there could be any doubt about the exactness of its main conclusions.

Now the public has been confusing the comet with the luminous streamer sometimes thrown out by comets on their approach to the sun, and called the "tail." But the tail is not an essential part of a comet, as the great majority of comets have no tail at all, and so pass unnoticed by the crowd.

When our present interesting visitor, known as "Halley's Comet," faded from mortal vision in May, 1836, it did not get away from our mathematical wizards, who followed it with unerring precision, during the 37½ years of its outward journey, just as surely as if they could see it all the time, and although at its aphelion, or farthest point from the sun, it was far beyond the most powerful telescope, or most delicate camera, its exact position and distance could have been stated at any moment. That being the case, it remained for astronomers and mathematicians to compute the exact point and approximate date at which it would be seen on its return trip. This great task was undertaken by two English astronomers atached to Greenwich observatory. As soon as their calculations were published many observers trained their photographic cameras on the spot indicated, and for many weary nights watched closely in the hope of being the first to catch the approaching stranger. On the 11th of September, 1909, Prof. Max Wolff of the University of Heidelberg was fortunate enough to notice a small object on his plate which was new to him. Of course, there were hundreds of stars on the plate, which had been exposed to the sky for six hours, and was therefore crowded with stars down to the sixteenth magnitude. But this new object, though very minute, was what he was looking for, and on the same appearing on the plates exposed the next night he became convinced that he had been rewarded for his pains by being the first to discover the celebrated comet. Two days later it was seen in the great Crossley Refractor at Lick Observatory. It was at that time only a small nebulous object about 250 million miles from the sun, between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter.

Now, ever since that date it has had telescopes, cameras and spectroscopes trained on it, night and day—it has been under the closest observation all the time. There has never been the least uncertainty as to when it would cross the sun's disc, and come between the earth and sun. Its observed passage has agreed precisely with the times and positions assigned for it down to the present moment.

But all these exact calculations have referred to the comet itself, and in no sense to the tail, which only appears as the comet nears the sun. Away about 150 million miles the comet appears to undergo an operation similar to that for appendicitis; it loses its tail entirely, and as it takes only a few months to move from that point, round the sun and back again, it can easily be seen that for most of its existence it is without that extraordinary appendage.

It is impossible to predict anlything certain about the tails of comets. We know very little of their constitution and composition; next to nothing about their course; and absolutely nothing at all of the laws which govern their movements.

In the present case, the prediction that the earth would pass through the tail of the comet was based upon a reasonable inference from the following well-known facts: tails of comets have been observed to stream out, almost invariably, exactly opposite to and away from the sun; it was an absolute certainty that Halley's comet would pass squarely between the earth and the sun, at a distance of 16 million miles from the former, on May 18, and if the tail held the same condition and shape on that date as when the perihelion was made, it seemed reasonably certain that he earth would pass through a portion of it. But this prediction belongs in an entirely different class to those referring to the motion and positions of the comet itself, about which there was never any doubt or failure. As it turned out the shape and condition of the tail underwent an important change which probably switched it away from the earth altogether. Authorities are not yet agreed as to what exactly has happened to it, and it may be some time before all the observations can be reduced and results worked out. But we may be assured that the matter will engage the study of the keenest intellects of mathematical and astronomical science who will not rest until they have reached a solution of the extraordinary phenomena exhibited by this wonderful tail.

Many persons were much disappointed at the comet; these persons expected to see a blood-red object in the sky corresponding to the fancy of an inflamed imagination; they belong to the same class as are disappointed the first time they see the Falls of Niagara; both the wonderful waterfall and the comet grow on the senses by contemplation.

Halley's comet is speeding away on its long journey and will soon be beyond our gaze. By the end of May it will be scarcely discernible; it will be followed by telescope perhaps till the end of 1910; by the camera for a few months longer. It will continue to form a popular theme of discussion for many months; but astronomers will take a year to two to collect and collate all their observations and reduce their calculations to final results. That much new information will be obtained there is every reason to believe, and the interest awakened in the public mind will be but held in abeyance, until science is ready to report progress.

FIRST ARTICLE.

"WHAT shall we do to keep the boys on the farm?" inquires one anxious sister who has seven daughters of marriageable age. The only way we know of, sister, is to hitch them to the hog house with a log chain. This is painful, but salutary, and is calculated to inspire respect for parental authority.

HITCH THEM TO THE HOG HOUSE.

No self respecting farmer will allow a bow legged, squat nosed, short tailed asthmatic rooster to wake him and his family every day at 3 a. m. with a high gear crow. There is no necessity of it. Just pipe the rooster's crow through a four inch exhaust pipe and run it underground into your neighbor's back yard.

Never allow the hired man to read Shakespeare or Carlyle while riding the corn cultivator. We knew a hired hand who devoured Emerson's "Essays" while thus engaged, and he became so absorbed that the team backed him into a barbed wire fence, ripping the lining from his abdominal cavity.

A balky horse is a trial in the home. Many cases are incurable, while others yield to mild and humane treatment, such as kicking the animal in the pit of the stomach with a hobnailed boot, tickling his nostrils with a crowbar, stroking him gently over the ears with an elm club, etc. The best way, however, is to sit quietly in the buggy and read extracts from the book of Job while waiting for the balkee to shoot the chutes.

The average so called hog cholera cure is a rank fraud, designed merely to separate the farmer from his milk check. We have placed on the market the only genuine cholera cure in existence. Here is the prescription: First lay the hog gently on his back in the front parlor and spray his stomach with iced tea. This provokes a consuming thirst on the part of the cholera germs, causing them to rise to the surface, when they can be easily removed with a pair of pliers. This treatment is good only during the dog days, for cholera germs have no thirst during the winter months.

After the boy has worked on the farm all summer for his board and overalls hand him 20 cents in currency and send him to the county fair for an outing. The average boy can have a regular Fourth of July celebration on 20 cents, and your generosity will endear him to the farm and give him a broad, liberal outlook on life.

Constant Reader wants to know if there is any way to keep a suckling calf quiet while teaching her how to drink skimmilk from a ten quart pail. The remedy is very simple: Grasp the calf firmly by the tail and nostrils, turn her face toward the setting sun and hit her twice in succession in the back of the head with a meat ax. This treatment has never been known to fail since Adam.

TURN HER FACE TOWARD THE SETTING SUN.

Don't stick up your nose at the King drag. It will make a sour road look sweet in less time than any other device known to man. The only objection to it is that it is too darned simple. It ought to have three or four flywheels, fifty or sixty cogs and a few hundred coil springs attached to it. Then at $285 f. o. b. Chicago were charged for it it might come into general use. As it is, it is handicapped by cheapness. Nobody wants a road drag which costs only a few boards off the back fence, a bolt or two from the windmill and a fistful of skinned knuckles.

Why not brighten up the hennery with those lace curtains that have seen better days?

Now is a good time to look over the calves' heads for warts. If there is no corn doctor in the neighborhood remove the warts with a drawshave, beginning at the southwest corner of the wart and working due east. If the calf is inclined to be restive under this treatment, soothe her with an ax helve laid firmly across the nose. If she recovers from this treatment she will live to be eighty years old.

REMOVE THE WARTS WITH A DRAWSHAVE.

With all due respect for wearers of the cloth, we advise against buying a jack that carries around indorsements from a minister of the gospel. We had a friend who bought a jack from a clergyman friend, who said that the children could use his caboose as a stepladder, and inside of a week the animal had scattered a large and growing family over a rock crushed road two and a half miles long. We would sooner trust our anatomy to the tender mercies of a drunken corn shredder than face the rotary action of a sleepy eyed mule which was once a member of a preacher's family. Despite the fact that the average preacher doesn't know a jack from a jackpot, we notice that when it comes to a horse trade he can paint rings around any other class of our citizenship.

The practice of dehorning as usually carried out is needlessly cruel. The best method is to have the horns extracted by a painless dentist, who will draw them while you wait at $1 per horn. The heifer which has inhaled a couple of bags of laughing gas while in the dentist chair will never kick anybody's front teeth loose again.

Every farmer ought to have a strop for his disk harrow. It is neat and inexpensive and when hung in the parlor makes a nice ornament. We advise against the use of the self stropping harrow. It is not practical and is liable to bleed the hired man when in perfect health.

The colt which persists in kicking the hind quarters off its mother every day or two should be curried with a 2 by 12 scantling applied across the posterior organism before every meal. A kicking colt can drive more men to the nearest saloon in passing a given point than any other article of furniture on the farm.

CURRIED WITH A 2 BY 12 SCANTLING.

One of our readers writes to ask if anything can be done with the voice of the female guinea hen. We think not, brother. It is as hopeless a proposition as the amateur tenor and just about as musical. The best treatment is to extract the voice with a bread knife and a pair of pipe tongs. When this is done thoroughly the voice rarely comes back.

Here is a little item which is worthy of consideration if you are fattening cattle for market: Just before weighing in feed a generous quantity of yeast foam and dried apples. Be careful not to overdo it, or the buyer may think you have been entertaining an epidemic of dropsy.

Home Course In Domestic Science

VIII.—Useful Labor Saving Devices.

By EDITH G. CHARLTON,

In Charge of Domestic Economy, Iowa State College.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.

HOUSEKEEPING has always been hampered to a certain extent by tradition and some superstition. Until recently few women thought of making investigations for themselves regarding questions in general housekeeping, the word of some great-grandmother being usually sufficient. The fact that the grandmother had no opportunity to study the laws of nature as seen in the ordinary process of living did not disturb the average woman's faith in her opinion. But now a change is gradually moving across the country, and the up to date housekeeper is alive to anything which suggests improved and easier methods of work. She will investigate new plans and try practicable suggestions which seem to offer greater facility in her work. But there is yet in our midst the conservative housekeeper. She is slow to adopt new methods or to provide new and better equipment for her work.

HOMEMADE FIRELESS COOKER.

There may be and often is another reason besides conservatism which makes her hesitate to change her mode of work. It is because the men, who are generally the money earners, are often averse to spending any sum of money for house equipment. Not being familiar with the details of domestic work and having larger interests in their own business, they are very apt to think women can get along with almost anything or, rather, they think that housework can be accomplished with any sort of tools.

Occasionally a woman dislikes to ask for what she needs, or sometimes she will not accept modern inventions when they are offered to her, and now and then we find one who will not use them when they are actually in her possession. It is not always easy to tell just where the fault lies or what it is, but one thing is certain, there has been less advance in housekeeping during the last twenty-five years than has been made by any other industry. Agriculture as it is carried on at present is no more like farming twenty-five years ago than truck gardening is like ranching. If the same interest had been taken in household affairs there might have been similar advancement in that most important of all industries.

There are numerous inventions on the market for making housework easier. Some of them are valuable, and others are worse than useless. Unless an implement after it has been given a fair trial is found to be a saver of both time, labor and energy it is not worth house room.

The Handy Fireless Cooker.

Among the most useful articles that have been brought into the kitchen within the last five years is the fireless cooker, or, as it was first named, the "hay box." The conception of the fireless cooker is a very old one, as some of the primitive races knew all about and practiced the art of cooking after this manner. But it was forgotten or neglected by civilized people until a few years back. Now the "hay box" has proved itself so useful as an economy of energy and fuel that it has come to stay. There are some handsome fireless cookers on the market that can be purchased for the moderate price of from $8 to $16, and so complete and perfect are they that freezing, steaming and roasting can be accomplished at the same time in the three separate compartments.

On several occasions I have frozen a mousse in one compartment, steamed corn bread in the second and cooked meat in the third at the same time and have had each dish "done to a turn" when it was needed for the table. With the additions of the hot soapstones that are included in some cookers meat may be roasted and bread, cake and pies baked most successfully without requiring the slightest attention after they are put in the baker. I know one housekeeper who does all her cooking, baking and roasting with the help of a fireless cooker and a fireless baker and a two burner gasoline stove. She has proved, too, that she accomplishes more work with better results at about one-half the cost of fuel and twice as much saving of her own time and labor as when she used a first class coal range.

Really the term "fireless cooker" is a misnomer, and a much better name would be "heat retainer," for there must first be heat enough to bring whatever is to be cooked to the boiling point or until it has been heated throughout to at least 180 degrees. This can be accomplished over any kind of fire. Then the heat is simply retained by the cooker for several hours or until the cooking is completed.

The Homemade Cooker.

It is not necessary to buy a cooker, though one or more should be included in every up to date kitchen equipment. Very satisfactory ones have been made out of a wooden box or pail lined carefully with hay, wood, excelsior or paper, which is covered with outing flannel or asbestus, leaving a hole in the center to fit closely around the utensil in which the food is cooked. The principle involved in using the cooker is that the receptacle is made of and lined with some nonconducting material which holds the heat in the food until it is cooked. For this reason a wooden box, barrel or pail is used for the outside part. This is lined three or four inches thick with wool, paper, excelsior or in some cases with exhausted air. A space is left in the center which fits closely around the covered granite utensil in which food is cooked. A padded cover fits tight over the top of the cooker, thus allowing no chance for the outside air to enter or the heat to escape. The temperature the food material is when it is put into the cooker will be retained for several hours, and the fall in temperature is very gradual. The principle is the same for freezing as in cooking, a low temperature being retained the same as a high degree of heat.

In the baker two soapstones are heated for fifteen minutes directly over the fire, and then one is placed above and the other below the article to be baked.

Cooking Cereals In the "Fireless."

The fireless cooker is especially adapted for foods that require long, slow cooking, but is not intended for articles which require rapid boiling. It is particularly well suited for cereals of all kinds, because the principle underlying the cooking of all starchy foods is that it should be slow, thorough and prolonged. In a previous article the statement was made that the breakfast oatmeal may be cooked in the fireless cooker. The directions for doing this are as follows:

To two cupfuls of boiling water add one teaspoonful of salt. Stir in gradually one cupful of oatmeal. Let it boil directly over the fire for five minutes, then place in the cooker for eight hours or overnight. If the oatmeal is cold in the morning reheat over hot water.

Many persons are familiar with the construction of the fireless cooker, but are not quite sure how to use one. For such a few general rules may be helpful.

Some General Directions.

As there is no evaporation in the cooker, use less water with cereals of any kind.

While cooking the food over the fire leave the vessel uncovered. This will permit the gases formed in cooking to escape. This is particularly necessary in preparing chicken and other meats for the cooker.

If the granite utensil used in the cooker is too large for the amount of food, use a smaller vessel in which to cook the food and set it inside the larger utensil, surrounded by hot water. To insure perfect success there should be two vacant spaces in the cooker or utensil.

This method of cooking is splendid for chicken fricassee, stews of all kinds, pot roasts, soups and for any meat dish which requires slow cooking. If the piece of meat is large reheating it after it has been in the cooker four or five hours and then continuing the cooking four or five hours longer will give better results.

The length of time the food is to be cooked over the fire depends on the size and nature of the food. A ten pound ham should simmer, never boil, for about forty minutes and cook in the cooker for ten hours, with a second reheating after the first four hours.

The fireless cooker is not intended for fresh vegetables of any kind. These, as previously stated, require rapid cooking, which cannot be accomplished in it. If the potatoes are cooked in it they are sure to be heavy and more or less watery.

If meat is liked brown this should be done before or after being put into the cooker.

Practical Cooking Utensils.

The variety and kind of utensils to be used in the kitchen are always an interesting topic to all good housekeepers. There is only one point to emphasize in equipping a kitchen, and that is that the best material is none too good; also the extent of the equipment should be equal to the needs of the housekeeper.

I have been in many kitchens where the utensils were in such a wornout condition and so insufficient in kind and number that I was not surprised to hear the woman say she disliked to cook or that she was an unsuccessful cook.

WEST GLENDALE

Mrs. J. O. Elliott entertained her sister, Mrs. Laura Scamman on Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Klein and little son Gerald spent Sunday and Monday at Catalina Island.

The many friends of Mrs. J. W. Everett, wife of Deputy Marshal James Everett, will be pleased to learn of her convalescence.

Gas is being installed in West Glendale homes as rapidly as the workmen can attend to the work, and is certainly appreciated by every one.

Mrs. J. J. Schremp is entertaining her sister, Mrs. Katharine Jones of San Bernardino. Mrs. Jones is the wife of a prominent druggist of that city.

Mrs. Herbert Kennedy and daughter Mildred will leave the latter part of next month for their old home in Boston. They will return in time for the opening of school in the fall.

Invitations have been sent to all friends and patrons of the West Glendale school, to attend the graduating exercises at the school building on Thursday afternoon, June 3rd.

Daniel Kelty and wife spent Memorial Day at Venice. They report a most enjoyable time with the exception of almost freezing while there. Quite a contrast to the day in Glendale, which was more like the Fourth of July.

Mrs. Ethel Haynes and Miss Alpha Cochran of Los Angeles spent Monday with their sister, Mrs. Cora Clay, at her home on Ivy street, and together with a number of friends attended the graduating exercises of the nurses at the Sanitarium in the evening.

The population of West Glendale has been swelled this week by the addition of Mr. C. H. Boyd and family who have moved into the cozy home on Ivy street recently built by Chandler & Lawson, and purchased by E. D. Reynolds. Mr. Boyd is well known in Glendale, having charge of the Valley Lumber Co.

Mr. Ball, a carpenter living on West Seventh and Columbus avenues, suffered a very serious accident in Los Angeles last week. A wheel of the bus in which he was returning from one of the depots came off, throwing the gentleman out with considerable force, causing paralysis of one side of his body. Mr. Ball has been confined at one of the hospitals in Los Angeles ever since the accident.

Mrs. R. W. Hammond, 1509 Ivy street, entertained a party of little ones on Monday afternoon in honor of little Edwin Hammond's fourth birthday. Games were played on the lawn, and refreshments consisting of ice cream and cake, etc., was served later. A jolly time was had by the little tots, who were loath to leave when the time came.

The Mission Church will celebrate Children's Day with appropriate exercises of which an account will be given in the NEWS later. The children are practicing faithfully and expect to have a very nice program. Rev. Morrison preached a patriotic sermon to a very large congregation on Sunday. The work of raising money for the building of a new church is going rapidly on. A goodly sum having been already made up.

Mrs. Taylor, principal of the West Glendale school, entertained the graduates of the school at her home on West First street on Saturday evening. The evening hours were whiled away by various games, music, etc., and ice cream and cake furnished the refreshments. A few of last year's graduates and invited friends were present, and every one certainly enjoyed themselves to their heart's content.

A number of scholars of the West Glendale school together with their principal, Mrs. Taylor, and musical instructor, Mrs. Gibson, attended the Memorial exercises at Grand View cemetery on Monday. The boys of the seventh and eighth grades rendered two very beautiful selections during the morning's exercises. Many flowers were furnished by every one, and not a grave in the cemetery was forgotten.

A delightful lawn party was given at the home of Mrs. Mulrey on Ivy and Pacific streets, on Thursday afternoon. It was strictly a children's affair at which about twenty-five little folks were entertained. Various games were indulged in, after which dainty refreshments were partaken of, consisting of cornucopias, sandwiches, cake, orangeade, etc. The party was given in honor of the hostess's little daughter, Katharine, Marie. Mrs. Mulrey was assisted in entertaining the little ones by Mrs. Harry Wolfe and friend.

Jas. W. Everett's West Glendale friends as well as his city friends congratulated him on his recent capture and look forward to the time when the criminal's partner will be landed behind the bars by the strong right arm of "Sunny Jim," or "Jas. J.," either title of which will fit our friend.

The merry tune of the hammer and saw can be heard in every direction, indicating the increasing building going on. A fine new home is being erected at the corner of Hawthorne and Columbus, and many others, too numerous to mention, at the present writing.

IT IS WONDERFUL HOW MUCH SATISFACTION CAN BE OBTAINED FROM A TALK OVER THE BELL TELEPHONE

A letter carries words, but the Bell Service has been brought up to such a point of perfection that the modulations of the voice are clearly heard.

The cheery tones show that the talker is well and in good spirits. The call may come from a suburban village or a distant city, but within the limits of the carrying power of the voice the Bell Service carries the tone as well. You get a personal interview with a friend hundreds of miles away.
